Israel Plans Severe Curbs On Domestic Newspapers And Foreign Press Writers

The Israeli Government is proposing legislation that would extensively widen its restrictions on domestic newspapers and on representatives of the foreign press. Under the draft anti-defamation law, which the Government offered in the Knesset (Parliament), a newspaper could be closed if it was found guilty of publishing two libelous statements in the course of two years.

Any citizen or foreign resident of Israel who publishes libelous information abroad about the state would be held criminally liable in Israel, writes Lawrence Fellows in the New York Times. The bill provides for imprisonment for one year but does not provide a definition of libel against the state.

Further, the proceedings of libel action would be made public only with the permission of the court, which could prohibit publication even of its judgment. Should the bill become law, a newspaper could be found guilty of libel if it should repeat the libelous words of anyone, even though reporting the words in his name.

A Knesset member, for instance, might make a libelous statement in the house in the heat of an election campaign and be protected by his parliamentary immunity. The protection would not extend to the newspaper that gave a verbatim report of his speech.

It would not be sufficient defense to plead that the allegedly libelous matter was true. The defendant must be able to show that even before he published it he had reasonable grounds for believing it to be true. He must also show that publication was in the "public interest" and that no more was published than was in the public interest.

The anti-defamation bill will probably not come up for its first reading in the Knesset for several months because of the long budget debate ahead. Several Israeli newspapers have not waited to criticize the bill as striking at the very roots of press freedom.

Haaretz, an independent daily, contended that if the bill became law, "even the publication of the truth about a person, an event, or a public accident will be largely forbidden." "Severe new restrictions are proposed on newspaper publication," it added, says the New York Times. "The clause about a court ban on a paper's appearance undermines the very existence of the press."

In a second editorial, Haaretz criticized that section that would threaten to make foreign correspondents, some of them foreign citizens, criminally liable for writing about aspects of life in Israel "which the fund-arising propagandists generally do not tell."

Haboker, the organ of the Liberal party, said that "in the opinion of broad sections of the public, the proposals injure several principles of the freedom of expression, both written and oral, and considerably limit the freedom of the press."

Davar, the organ of Histadrut, the general labor federation, maintained that the existing slander law was inadequate but said that, though the bill would do much to correct this, it also would hamper the press.

In general the press abundantly uses its freedom to make political comment, including criticism of the Government. Both the domestic and foreign press is subject to a general censorship that is limited officially to "security" matters but that in practice, is extended usually to matters that would involve severe diplomatic embarrassment.

Most of the press has accepted the rules of censorship gracefully. The dailies participate with the army on a committee to punish their members who violate censorship. On some occasions the press has agreed to self-censorship.

In a meeting, Israeli editors expressed some indignation over what they considered unfair repayment by the Government for their years of cooperation with the censor, says the New York Times. They were especially upset over the possibility that their papers could be shut down for unwittingly printing a libel in a reader's letter or advertisement, or in some other form not affected by editorial policy.

The bill's drafters say this was not the intent and hint that the provision may be reworded to limit the liability to persons connected with editorial staffs or policy-directing bodies.

Except in the provision for ordering the closing of newspapers, actual publication of libelous matter would not be necessary to secure a conviction. The bill makes no other distinction between libel and slander.

It does make a distinction between civil and criminal libel: In a civil action for damages, the bill states, "it is sufficient that the libel comes to the knowledge of one other person;" in a criminal action, the libel must be "published to two or more persons."

The bill recognizes criminal libel not only of an individual but of "members of a community, a religion, a group of people, or any other group, whether particular persons are identifiable as objects of the libel or not."

Thus, under these provisions for group libel, the Attorney General could bring a criminal action against a newspaper if it should publish an article giving an account, say, of a former Defense Minister's testimony that a number of unnamed army officers had conspired to fix him with the blame for an unsuccessful (one word deleted here by censor) operation he said he had had no knowledge of, says the New York Times. Testimony rather like this was given a Knesset committee in October, 1960, by Pinhas Lavon, (the rest of this paragraph, about twenty-five words, was also deleted. The Lavon case is presumed to involve an unsuccessful espionage operation in Cairo.)

W.J.C. Leader Warns On Latin America As Fertile Ground For Nazis

Unstable political and economic conditions in Argentina and other Latin American lands have enabled certain groups, calling themselves nationalists, but in fact typical Nazi formations, to secure added strength, Dr. Isaac Goldenberg, World Jewish Congress leader and president of the DAIA, the representative body of Argentinian Jewry, said in New York, on his way to Israel for Zionist meetings.

He was welcomed by Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, director of the International Affairs Department of the World Jewish Congress. The Argentinian Jewish leader told a Congress news conference, that these neo-Nazi groups had recently taken advantage of the situation to perpetrate a number of anti-Semitic attacks.

"The problem is not confined to Argentina," Dr. Goldenberg declared. "It is Latin American in extent, although we in Argentina have given it special attention and placed emphasis on exposing the danger." He said the neo-Nazi groups now in existence in Argentina fell into two categories: older, deeper entrenched groups favoring aggressive nationalism on the part of more conservative elements in the country; and groups of a typical Nazi character, which have appeared more recently and are composed of frustrated scions of old-time families, misfits, and sons of Nazis who had fled Europe, typical material for a Nazi-Fascist group.

Dr. Goldenberg said both types of groups shared an obsessive hatred of the democratic system. They tried by violent means, to upset democratic processes, posing an imminent risk to the liberal concepts of life. Contending that racial anti-Semitism was ridiculous in Latin America, he said the neo-Nazi elements practiced political anti-Semitism with emphasis on the economic position of the Jews. The more recent Nazi-Fascist formations had still not won great numbers to their cause but, if social insecurity, unemployment and anxiety continue, they could attract great popular sectors.

One of the main difficulties in countering such developments was the absence of mature democratic conditions in Latin America, able to ensure that unavoidable social-economic changes are carried through peacefully. In this situation there was a danger that the institutional structure of a country might be overwhelmed by uncontrolled mob action.

"But the risk is not merely that of physical or moral attacks," Dr. Goldenberg said. "There is a danger, not immediate, but rather long-term, that in the event of social restructuring certain Jewish sectors may be left helpless." While the Latin American Jewish community was alert to, and concerned by, the situation, it remained calm, the DAIA President said.

"Those Jews who duly understand the evolution of the changing world in which we live, will be better able to face up to the problems that may confront them," Dr. Goldenberg commented. "In recent events the Argentinian Jewish community has displayed a great political maturity, rallying with an unshakeable discipline around the DAIA which, without exception is accepted and respected by all sectors of Jewish life as the only representative of the community. The DAIA acts with the support of all Jewish institutions of the community and maintains its international connection as a member of the World Jewish Congress. No steps affecting Argentinian Jewry must be taken abroad without previous consultation with the DAIA, especially in these times when the complexity of the problems and reaction of public opinion require a great knowledge of local conditions and great moderation insofar as action is concerned."

W. Z. O. Head Says American Jewry Must Be Conscious Part Of Unique World Jewry, Not Just Religious Group

Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, declared in Jerusalem that the tendency among Jews in the United States to regard themselves essentially as members of a religious denomination would lead to a "distortion of the character of the Jewish people." In a speech prepared for delivery before the Zionist General Council, reports Lawrence Fellows, of the New York Times, he said the Zionist movement had to fight this tendency if Zionism was to be a main influence in Jewish life.

The 140-member Council of the World Zionist Organization opened its eight-day annual meeting in an atmosphere charged with controversy about Zionist influence in Israel's foreign policies.

Premier David Ben-Gurion was reported to have strongly criticized Dr. Goldmann at a cabinet meeting for what the Premier described as the American Zionist leader's interference in Israel's conduct of her foreign affairs.

Dr. Goldmann rejected the charge at a news conference and made only a brief reference in his speech to the chronically strained relations between the Government of Israel and the Zionist movement, which brought it into existence.

Zionism, founded in the nineteenth century by Theodor Herzl, a Viennese journalist, aimed at Jewish colonization of Palestine, the land of Zion. With the establishment of Israel, it has espoused the unification of Jews the world over through the strengthening of every phase of Jewish life.

Dr. Goldmann severely criticized the fragmentation of organized Judaism in the United States and the "vast army of professional officials" in the Jewish community. He also deplored the "tendency to base the whole of Jewish life and the organization of Jewish life solely on the synagogue."

"It is obvious," the Zionist leader said, according to the New York Times, "that the synagogue has always played a central role in Jewish life and must continue to do so, and nobody will deny the great beneficial influence which the growing number of synagogues, congregations, and community centers have on American Jewish life."

"But to try to organize the Jewish people exclusively on the synagogue," he added, "is a distortion of the character of the Jewish people, which was never only a religion or a church but which has many other elements and which is a unique people in this respect.

"American Jewry," Dr. Goldmann said, "must not try to become a purely religious denomination among other religious groups in America but must maintain the conscience of being part of the Jewish people all over the world in its unique character, which is much more than a purely religious one and is becoming more and more

Bnai Brith Leader Bids Jews To Go Beyond Their Own Problems

The newly-elected president of District One of Bnai Brith, S. Arthur Glixon, a New York City attorney, called on his organization to go beyond "concern with Jewish problems," and to stamp out racial and religious injustices wherever members see them, reports the New York Herald Tribune. "We have learned through long and bitter experience that no matter who are victims of injustice, our own lives are adversely affected," he said.

Mr. Glixon cited the problem of segregation in the U.S., and the dilemmas faced by Christians and Jews in Communist countries, as part of the "eternal struggle" for equal rights and justice for people of all races and creeds.

He took office as the district ended its 110th annual convention, attended by 2,000 delegates, at the Hotel Concord, at Kiamesha Lake, N. Y. He is president of the Association of Trial Lawyers of the City of New York, and a member of the Manhattan Council of the State Commission Against Discrimination. He succeeds George E. Gordon, of Boston.

Delegates passed a resolution assailing "de facto racial segregation" in public schools, caused by community housing patterns. The measure asked for appropriate redistricting and bus transportation to overcome the situation.

It also urged exemption from Sunday closing laws for businesses which close on a sabbath other

Hiking in summer is pleasant exercise, providing the hiker's shoes are comfortable and suitable in style. High heels or tight shoes can be very unpleasant and tiring. An extra pair of socks to change when feet begin to tire, will help ward off fatigue.

W.J.C. Wants Witnesses Of Lodz Ghetto Massacres At Once

So thorough was the Nazi extermination of the Lodz Ghetto, that few persons have been found able to testify against a number of Nazis now facing trial in West Germany. In a last minute effort, the German authorities have sought the aid of the World Jewish Congress in New York in tracking down witnesses. The investigation into the crimes at Lodz is due to finish within the next few weeks, after which no new evidence may be submitted, according to German law.

The German police have detained Otto Bradfisch, former Commander of the German State Police in Lodz, and one of his aides, Guenter Fuchs. These two Nazis and others are charged with participating in the deportation of the 200,000 Jews from Lodz to the extermination camps at Auschwitz and Chelmno. Anyone who can testify in this matter is requested to call or write at once to: Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, director of the World Jewish Congress Institute of Jewish Affairs, 15 East 84th Street, New York 28, N.Y.

Witnesses should state their names and addresses and the names of Nazis against whom testimony is to be given.

W. Z. O. HEAD SAYS

tied up morally, emotionally, and spiritually with Israel, based on the acceptance of the central position of Israel in Jewish life of today and tomorrow."

Dr. Goldmann declared that if the Zionist movement was to check harmful tendencies it had to have the complete support of the Government of Israel. The Zionist leader opposed the view credited to Premier Ben-Gurion that Zionism completed its mission with the establishment of Israel fourteen years ago.

"The naive illusion that the Zionist concept has lost its meaning, that Zionism has fulfilled its task and could leave the scene of Jewish history, proves from day to day to be less justified by the facts of the situation," he said, says the New York Times.

"All the main purposes of the Zionist movement — to create a Jewish homeland and make it secure and to use this homeland as the main instrument to secure the survival of the Jewish people by organizing large immigration and by making Israel the center of Jewish life, are far from being fulfilled," he said.

The Soviet bloc is hostile to Israel, Dr. Goldmann said and Israel cannot count on the all-out support of Western countries in her disputes with the Arab states. Economically, he asserted, Israel is far from self-supporting.

Dr. Goldmann declared that Jewish communities abroad, while not seriously threatened by anti-Semitism, were facing dangers of a different nature.

He noted the revolutionary atmosphere prevalent in many areas of the world and the fact that social upheavals could ruin Jews of the prosperous middle and upper classes of society.

"The classic example," Dr. Goldmann said, "is [Premier Fidel] Castro's Cuba, where a flourishing Jewish community was ruined overnight, not because of any anti-Semitic tendencies of the Castro regime but because of the social revolution he brought about."

Another threat, he said, is nationalism that does not deny equal human and civic rights to Jews but is not ready to "allow the Jews to live their own Jewish life religiously, culturally, and nationally," reports the New York Times. This, Dr. Goldmann asserted, is the problem of the 3,000,000 Jews in the Soviet Union.

Israeli Sleuth By Day, Sculptor By Night

Sleuth by day, sculptor by night, Winnipeg-born Eli Ilan, carved out for himself a dual career in Israel since his immigration there fourteen years ago. As a worker in the scientific laboratories of Tel Aviv's Criminal Identification Department, thirty-four-year-old Ilan identifies everything from skulls to footprints, teeth to tool marks. His archaeological and anthropological interests, developed in his early kibbutz days in Israel, have served him well not only in his detection work, but also in the avocation he has chosen which has become his second profession: that of sculptor.

Though Ilan's careers in both fields developed in Israel, his training for them was partially acquired in Canada. After almost nine years' living the rugged kibbutz life in Israel, doing agricultural work, and going on archaeological digs in his spare time, Ilan joined Tel Aviv's police force and after a few months, in the spring of 1957, decided to return to Canada to study methods of police identification with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at its Ottawa Headquarters.

In his two and a half years back in Canada, Ilan also worked for the CBC-TV design department in Toronto, and managed to take a sculpture course at Ontario College of Art in Toronto, under the tutelage of the noted Scottish sculptor, Thomas Bowie, who had recently immigrated to Canada.

His diversity of interests did not come out of the blue, of course. Although Ilan had arrived in Israel at the tender age of twenty, accompanied by his young wife Pnina (nee Pearl Reider, of Winnipeg, whose parents now live in Toronto), he had had a year of pre-medical training at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, and a year at a Hechalutz training farm. Thus when he settled as an army enlistee in the border kibbutzim, he already had some background for both his agricultural and his other cultural pursuits: namely, digging into the nature of man and his distant past.

In a land where every plow can at any moment toss up an ancient artifact, the four A's that Ilan found himself engaged in studying, agriculture, archaeology, anthropology, and art, each led quite logically to the next. Ilan began to organize excavations in the Galil, found tools and relics, artifacts and even art works, of ancient man, and started a small museum at the kibbutz. Around this time he also began to paint and sculpt. For a long time he showed no one his work, but eventually he began to exhibit some of his pieces. Following his departure from the kibbutz and his studies in Canada, Ilan returned to Tel Aviv to plunge fully into his dual professions.

After intense but interesting hours at the Criminal Identification Department, Ilan returns to his studio home in Bat Yam (just south of Tel Aviv and ancient Jaffa) to spend odd hours or whole week-ends and holidays on hammering and chiseling away at wood, stone, and metal. The results, strong, curved and angular variations on the human form, have been in one-man exhibits in Toronto (1959), in Israel (1961), and in group shows. He is at the moment on show at the Sheraton Hotel Art Gallery. A recent group exhibition in Tel Aviv of Israeli artists led to the Ministry of Education's purchase of Ilan's entry, a one-metre-high teakwood figure. Other Ilan pieces are owned by private collectors in the U.S.A., Israel, and Canada, three of these being Dr. Howard Young, and Mrs. M. Levy, of Toronto; and Mrs. A. Grosh, of Winnipeg.

Now the father of a nine-year-old son and a twelve-year-old daughter, Ilan was born Allen Schulbaum. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Schulbaum, still live in Winnipeg at 310 Queenston Street. Ilan (Hebrew for tree or baum) attended Kevin Technical High School, then went on to the University of British Columbia, after which he and his wife went together to the training farm which helped to prepare them for their present productive life in Israel.

A practical knowledge of swimming is important, not only as a healthy form of exercise but also as a life-saver in case of water accidents. It is a good idea for children to learn to swim as soon as they are old enough to understand the instruction.

Brights FINE CANADIAN Wines
SINCE 1874

At your sabbath table, a decanter of wine is as much at home as a challah.

No wine is more welcome in Jewish homes in Canada than Mazel Tov, a wine made from Concord grapes grown on the sunny slopes of the Niagara Peninsula.

Mazel Tov is ruby red in colour, and richly sweet—but not cloying—to the taste. It's a wine you'll "remember", the kind of wine that you used to taste many years ago.

Mazel Tov, made 'Kosher l'Pesach' under strict rabbinical supervision, is available throughout the year for every 'simcha'.

Governor-General Opens Congress Convention; Bronfman Addresses 700 Delegates

Their Excellencies Governor-General Georges P. Vanier and Mrs. Vanier attended the opening dinner of the 13th plenary session of the Canadian Jewish Congress in the King Edward-Sheraton Hotel, in Toronto. Mr. Vanier, who opened the convention, said the Jewish people have always dedicated themselves to the preservation of family life. Disintegration of family life leads to poverty, disease, and juvenile delinquency.

"The family is the fundamental institution of our society," he said, "the essential element of the community without which it cannot exist. And the strength of the family is the exact measure of the strength of the community."

He said that in the annals of time there is no more powerful story than that of the Jews. Their 4,000 years of history revealed every facet of man's nature in achievement and tragedy.

"It is a record of courage, perseverance, and hope — qualities without which the Jews, scattered throughout the world, would never have survived; qualities which alone made possible the re-establishment of Israel; qualities which in that marvellous land today challenge the imagination."

Mr. Vanier said the story of the Jews is an inspiration and also a warning. "The persecution and tragedy of the past are history's lessons which should be heeded by all. They testify to what can happen when man forsakes his value; they are a cogent reminder of how easily mistakes are repeated."

Attended by Lt.-Col. H. T. Tye, Their Excellencies were greeted at the main entrance of the hotel by Samuel Bronfman, president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, and Mrs. Bronfman, of Montreal; Monroe Abbey, chairman of the national executive, and Mrs. Abbey, of Montreal; and Gordon Cardy.

Mr. Bronfman, retiring as president of the Congress after twenty-five years in office, addressed seven hundred delegates at the opening dinner. He said that he would not stand for election but that he was very pleased that Congress had constitutionally provided for a Board of Governors, over which he would preside. Other past officers of Congress will comprise it. Mr. Bronfman said that his last presidential report, therefore, would be more than the account of stewardship and the three year review, although he could not try to catalogue all of the important work done by Congress in the past quarter century, but would recount a number of highlights:

"Congress was, at the end of the war, constantly preoccupied with the fate of wanderers, refugees, war victims, and the uprooted led us to plead the case of the Canadian Jewish community to the non-Jewish world and ultimately to Government. As a result we were in a few years able to release interned refugees, obtain permits for 1,200 war orphans, and settle tailors, milliners and furriers, and took the initiative in changing the law so as to permit the joinder of families."

Mr. Bronfman urged that some lessons from the past should be derived in order to vouchsafe the future. "Canadian Jewry must believe implicitly in the need for a complete existence and not a partial one. We must recognize that there is no Canadian Jewish life, in its virile and meaningful sense, without authenticity. The responsibility of the Jews of Canada must also be engendered on behalf of the Jews of other lands. Jews of Canada, for at least the measurable future, will be concerned about harassed Jewry elsewhere; about the Jews' ability to survive in Communist countries; and about Jews with foreboding disabilities. Canadian Jews cannot be immune to changes in Jewish life elsewhere. One of the main instruments is the World Jewish Congress with which Congress has been associated since its formation."

Mr. Bronfman also referred to the increasingly important role Congress is playing on the world Jewish scene. The Canadian Jewish Congress, he said, is the organized expression of this particular responsibility. It relies on every Jew in Canada to give it the mandate to continue in its work. Referring to Canadian Jewry's close ties with Israel, Mr. Bronfman said that Canadian Jewry realized over ten years ago that large help on a scale not yet appreciated had to be given to Israel. He referred to the contributions Canadian Jewry has made to the Jewish State's economic upbuilding both by the purchase of securities and by private investment.

Mr. Bronfman said: "If we are characterized by a survivalist philosophy, then the Canadian Jewish Congress must be ever alert to the eroding influences of assimilation which paradoxically are all the more persuasive in a society such as ours where anti-Semitism, though it exists, has abated tremendously since World War II. It can be said that emancipation and freedom have threatened the survival of the Jewish people as a religious and cultural entity more than persecution has worked to preserve it."

Mr. Bronfman disclosed in his presidential address, that the assistance of the Vatican has been solicited in the battle against anti-Semitism, and that the result of various studies, and conclusions, may warrant the attention of His Holiness, Pope John XXIII.

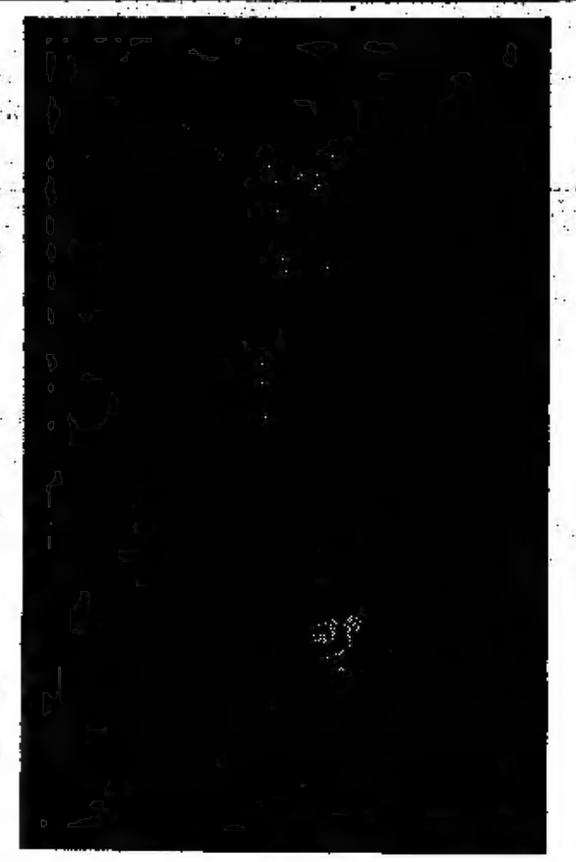
Mr. Bronfman spoke of the establishment of the Conference of Jewish Organizations—comprising the representative organizations of most Jewish communities in the "free world"—and added:

"Our efforts in COJO are now mainly directed to submissions to the Vatican to exercise plenitude of its enormous influence to extirpate anti-Semitism, and to remove from liturgy and Catholic literature the misunderstood and dangerous anti-Jewish references which have, in ages past, been an incitement against the Jewish people and have made truly close relationships impossible.

"Our documents have been warmly received, are being studied, and may well be placed before the Ecumenical Council summoned by His Holiness, Pope John XXIII."

Other duties of this presidential era were: preparing for postwar settlements; leading the Canadian delegation at San Francisco on the establishment of the United Nations so as to safeguard the position of Palestine to ready it for statehood; participation in the Paris meetings with the delegations of countries drafting peace treaties; preparing the "accounting" for the establishment of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany and Austria; membership on the War Technical Board; executive committees of the Canadian Red Cross, the Canadian Welfare Council, Joint Hospital Drives; appointment to the Canada Council; assistance to the McGill University School of Commerce; on the Committee of Prince Phillip's Second Commonwealth Study Conference; as chairman of innumerable committees in the Jewish and non-Jewish communities, local and national, for diversified cultural and philanthropic causes; calling together the United Zionist Council, Bnai Brith, and Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds to establish with Congress the Israel Bond Organization of which Mr. Bronfman is national president; and the Israel Trading Corporation which made possible the purchase of food stocks; establishment of the Canada Israel Development Ltd. to foster Canadian investment in Israel.

Mr. Bronfman will continue as a vice president of the Conference of Jewish Material Claims Against Germany; the chairman of the North American Division of the World Jewish Congress; a vice-president of the International executive of the World Jewish Congress; president of Canada-Israel Securities Ltd.



Michael Garber, Q.C., 4338 Montrose Avenue, Montreal, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Canadian Jewish Congress, and one of the most distinguished leaders of Canadian Jewry, was elected national president of the Congress, at the 13th plenary session held in Toronto. The immediate past president, and chairman of the Board of Governors, is Samuel Bronfman, of Montreal; immediate past chairman of the national executive, Monroe Abbey, Q. C., of Montreal; chairman of the national executive, J. Irving Oelbaum, of Toronto; national vice-presidents: Harold Lande, Q. C., of Montreal; Professor Jacob Finkelman, Q. C., of Toronto; Saul Cherniack, of Winnipeg; and Moe Cohen, of Vancouver; treasurer, Samuel Harvey, of Montreal; secretary, David Slater, of Winnipeg.

Regional chairmen are: Leon Kronitz, of Montreal; Meyer W. Gasner, of Toronto; David Levin, Q. C., of Winnipeg; Dr. Harry L. Stein, of Vancouver.

The Board of Governors consists of: Monroe Abbey, Q. C.; Lavy M. Becker, Joseph H. Fine, Q. C., all of Montreal; Sol Kanee, B. Sheps, of Winnipeg; Esmond Lando, of Vancouver; A. B. Bennett, Ben. Sadowski, M. B. E., and Dr. S. B. Hurwich, of Toronto.

Honorary vice-presidents are: Allan Bronfman, I. M. Bobrove, Q. C.; S. D. Cohen, L. Zuker, all of Montreal; and Noah Heinish, of Halifax, N. S., Eastern Region of Congress; A. B. Bennett, Israel Freeman, Samuel Kronick, Ben. Sadowski, M. B. E., all of Toronto; Edward E. Gelber, of Jerusalem, formerly of Toronto; Dr. Israel Goldstick, of London, Ont., Central Region; M. A. Gray, M. L. A., and Nathan Selchen, of Winnipeg; Samuel Promislow, of Regina; Ernest Bricker, of Saskatoon; Morris Hector, of Calgary; Wolfe Margolus, of Edmonton, Western Region; David Matlin and Charles Walfish, of Vancouver, B. C., Pacific Region.

In accepting elevation to the highest office in the gift of Canadian Jewry, Michael Garber said: "I am taking the mantle of leadership with confidence", and quoted, "When you borrow the cloak in the morning, return it at night". "I promise", he said, "that when the day is done, I'll return it, and it will be clean".

Mr. Garber pointed out that, as the new president, he was only the fourth to hold that office. The first president was the esteemed Lyon Cohen, of Montreal; the second was S. W. Jacobs, of Montreal, then the first and only Jewish Member of Parliament in Canada, "and a sweet man". Twenty-five years ago Congress was small, and the need was obvious for some one who could be a salesman, who could weld it together, who could change it, and give it a new colouration, and put it on a dynamic, real, organization basis. Mr. Garber said that he and a few other leaders felt that if the imagination of Mr. Bronfman could be captured, he would be the very man who could give the new, needed look to Congress, and apply to it his intellectual capacity for leadership. Now Mr. Bronfman was doing the same for Mr. Garber.

The new president spoke of the tremendous responsibility to Jews in Canada, and those in other countries, which the Congress must face, providing for the well-being of those who are living in peace and security, and those who are living in conditions which also seem to be so, but where, overnight, they may be in flight, such as Central or South America, where Jews are not even sure of their future.

"We are grateful", he said, "that Canadian Jewry is highly regarded throughout the world, and that we are looked to for leadership. We have to live up to what is expected of us; to live up to the intrinsic values of Jewish life".

Eichmann Henchmen Face Trial; Hundreds Being Investigated

In addition to ex-Nazi Colonel Otto Runsche now on trial in Frankfurt, justice is catching up with another five Eichmann collaborators, according to a report prepared by the World Jewish Congress in New York. About to be tried or under investigation are: Eichmann's transportation chief, ex-Nazi Lieutenant Franz Novak who, with Franz Slavik, of Eichmann's unit in Hungary, has been arrested in Austria, Hermann Krumey, deputy chief of Eichmann's Commando; Wilhelm Zopf, and Erich Doebner, of Eichmann's office in The Hague, Holland.

All the last-named Nazis are under arrest in Germany. Also under arrest in Germany is Harry Wentritt, inventor of the mobile gas murder vans which preceded the gas chambers. These facts are contained in a report on the prosecution of Nazi criminals prepared for the executive of the World Jewish Congress by Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, of New York, the director of the organization's Institute of Jewish Affairs.

Several hundred other Nazis are now under investigation in connection with war-time crimes, and he notes that "such an effort would not have been undertaken if there were not large numbers of important (Nazi) criminals unpunished." The tracking down and trials of these Nazis are not based on vengeance, and are not 'victor' trials, they are conducted by the Germans themselves, Dr. Robinson notes, "Western Germany has come to the conclusion that the existence of large numbers of 'murderers among us' is detrimental to good government and the development of democracy." A certain parallel action, although on a smaller scale, has started in Austria, he reports.

Although six Eichmann collaborators are facing or will soon face justice, others, including Alois Brunner, are in hiding and some, including the brothers Hans and Rolf Guenther, and Ernst Moss, are missing. The fate of the majority of Eichmann's aides is unknown. Brunner was Eichmann's representative in Greece, France, and Slovakia; the Guenther brothers were on Eichmann's staff in Prague. Dr. Robinson names other big-time Nazis either under investigation or facing trial:

Nazi Major-General Wilhelm Koppe, who made most of Poland "judenrein," clear of Jews. Koppe lived for many years under an assumed name as a director of a chocolate factory and was arrested only recently.

Nazi Major-General Karl Wolff, Chief of Staff of Himmler and later Supreme SS and Police Chief in Italy, who arranged a daily shipment of 5,000 Jews to Treblinka death camp.

Lt.-Col. Wilhelm Hahn, Warsaw District Security Police Commander, who prospered after the war and was arrested in Hamburg.

Heinz Auerswald, Warsaw Ghetto Commissioner, who returned to his law practice after the war.

Richard Baer, the last commandant of Auschwitz camp, and Robert Mulka, adjutant for Auschwitz infamous commander, Rudolf Hoess, who was executed in Poland.

Erich Neumann, Chief of the Nazi Security Police in Holland and Belgium.

Himmler's chief adjutant, S.S. General Werner von Alvensleben-Schochwitz.

Gustav Richter, expert of Jewish Section for Rumania.

A number of camp doctors who performed so-called medical experiments on Nazi victims and selected candidates for the gas chambers have also been arrested, including: Otto Adams, of Buchenwald, and Sachsenhausen; Otto Haupt, of Stutthof; Heinrich Rindfleisch, of Maidanck; Emil Schmitz, of Sachsenhausen; and Kurt Uhlenbrock, of Auschwitz.

"Not all of those who played a role on a higher level in the Nazi regime have been tried, are under arrest, or investigation, or dead, or missing," Dr. Robinson notes. This is partly due to the fact that the statute of limitations has expired in certain categories, and to "the difficulty of proving after so many years murder or participation therein in the case of persons who personally committed no act of murder in the conventional sense of the word."

Many of the big-time Nazis, Dr. Robinson reports, are hiding abroad:

Fritz Suhren, former commandant of Sachsenhausen and Ravensbrueck, who escaped from detention.

Dr. Joseph Mangele, notorious Auschwitz doctor, often referred to, who lived for a long time under his own name in Argentina and is now hiding somewhere in Latin America.

Dr. Robert Schumann, responsible for sterilizations in Auschwitz; now chief medical officer in Ghana.

Prof. Horst Schumann, also responsible for sterilizations in Auschwitz and Ravensbrueck.

Hans Eisele, of Dachau, is apparently in Egypt with other Nazis.

Karl Klingenfuss, former Nazi Foreign Office official, somewhere abroad.

Siegfried Uberreither, Gauleiter of Styria, now believed to be in South America.

Dr. Robinson states that: "These are only a few of the large number of Nazis known or presumed to be in foreign countries, whose extradition has either not been requested or has been refused."

than Sunday. And it opposed granting of Regents' credit to high school students for released time, as a violation of Church-State separation.

Delegates were warned sharply, at a luncheon, by Dr. Judah J. Shapiro, of New York, secretary of the National Council of Jewish Culture, that there is "increasing illiteracy" among Jews in the U.S. about their heritage and intellectual tradition, says the New York Herald Tribune. "Our Jewish education is mostly ornamental, and it is rarely useful," he said.

Dr. Fred C. Schwarz complained of "defamatory statements" made about him by Arnold Forster, civil rights director of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith. Mr. Forster told a district meeting of his organization that Dr. Schwarz is "one of today's foremost practitioners of a philosophy of despair and gloom."

Dr. Schwarz, an Australian-born physician who has been conducting anti-Communism "schools" around the country, said in a letter to Label Katz, Bnai Brith president, that the charge was "grossly inaccurate and derogatory."

Biggest Job Of Israel Bonds Is To Develop Negev

Future immigration into Israel depends on the development of the Negev, Dr. Joseph Burg, Minister for Social Welfare of the State of Israel, said on his arrival at Idlewild Airport for a tour of major communities in the United States and Canada in behalf of the Israel Bond drive. Prior to his arrival in New York, Dr. Burg spoke at the first meeting of his tour in Montreal, where his presentation of Israel's development needs stimulated an enthusiastic response to the Israel Bond campaign. The Israel Bond effort seeks to raise a minimum of $66,500,000 during 1962 for the establishment of industries and the construction of homes, particularly in the Negev, to make possible the absorption of immigrants now arriving in Israel at a greatly increased rate.

"Our hopes for the economic future of Israel," Dr. Burg said, "our plans for taking in large numbers of Jews, are bound up with the success of our effort to reclaim the desert, to establish new industries, to make the Negev a center of mass settlement. This is the most decisive economic task confronting Israel today; its fulfillment will make it possible for the Negev to play a major role in Israel's economic growth.

"Our experience in settling and integrating many immigrants during recent years should help us in furthering mass settlement in the Negev during this decisive period in our country's history. Moreover, we feel that our experience in this connection should be of considerable help to other nations facing similar problems.

"Within the next few years, we must bring water down from the north to irrigate at least 100,000 acres of the Negev. We must complete the building of a new port at Ashdod and expand the port of Elath. We must put up factories and tens of thousands of homes, and hasten the construction of new development towns in various parts of the Negev. For all of these tasks we require an increased flow of funds through the medium of the Israel Bond drive. The success of the Israel Bond effort is vital to the realization of Israel's program for the absorption of newcomers."
